

Don't Eat Pete!

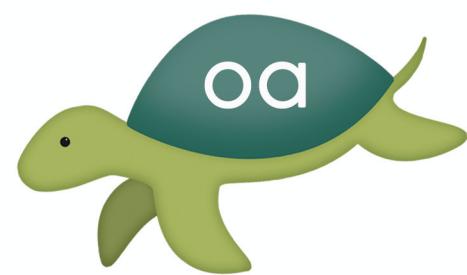

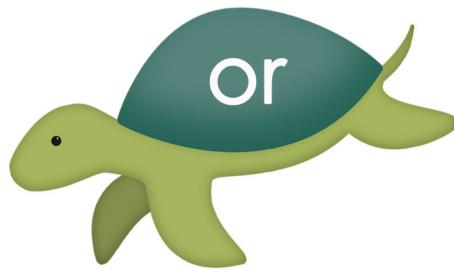

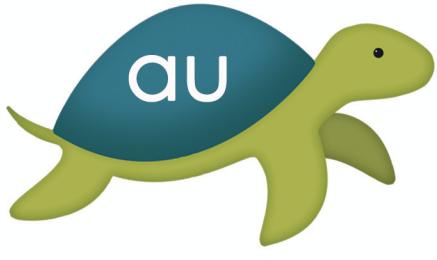

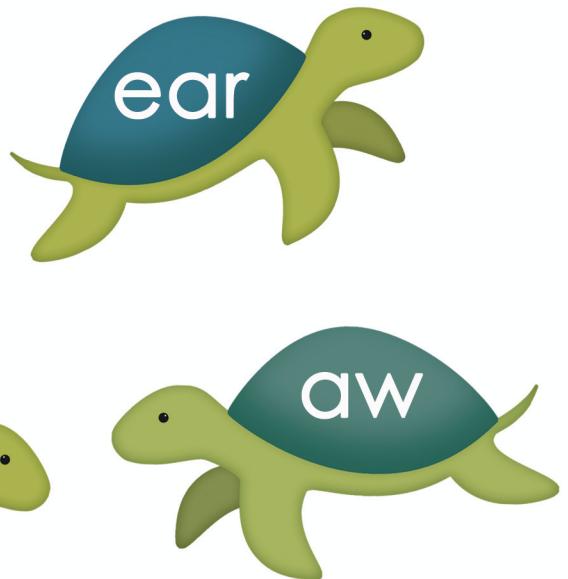

Don't Eat Pete!

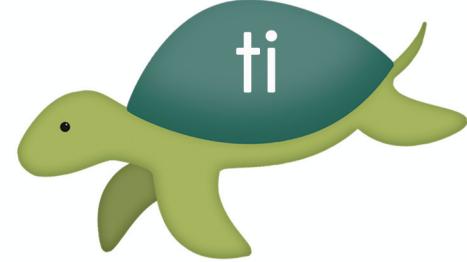

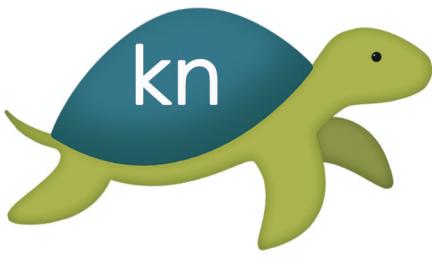

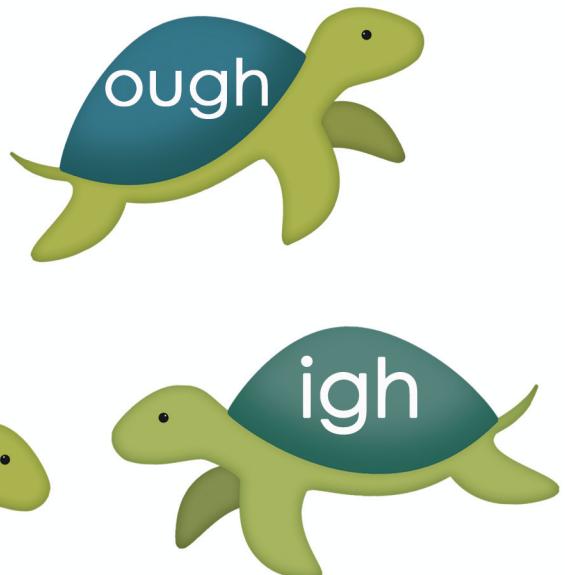

Don't Eat Pete!

Don't Eat Pete!

Don't Eat Pete!

Don't Eat Pete Instructions:

Prerequisites: This game is meant as a tool for review and motivation. Before playing the game, students should have already spent some time learning the facts on their game board. (They don't need to know them perfectly, but they should have at least been introduced to the facts previously.)

Materials Needed:

- Game board
- Lots of small objects to use as markers
(For classic, "Don't Eat Pete," use small candies like M&Ms or Skittles)

Object of the Game

- To solve as many problems as you can without "EATING PETE!"

How to play

- Send one player out of the room.
- The remaining players cover all the pictures with markers and select one picture to be "Pete." They invite player back into the room.
- One at a time, that player lifts a marker and tells the answer to the fact that was underneath. If he answers correctly, he continues to pick up markers and complete the facts. Play ends when he gets an answer wrong, or when he selects the marker that was covering "Pete." If he selects Pete, the other players yell "Don't Eat Pete!"
- The game continues as each player has a turn solving the problems on the game board that fits their *level.

There are many ways to score this game.

- If using candy, raisins, cheerios, etc., players can eat the treat as they play or wait until the end and count their points.
- If using coins, players can keep track of the amount of money they earn with each game and turn their amount in for real spending money.
- If you want to have a winner, then each player should keep track of the points they earn with each game. The player with the most points after each player has had the same number of turns wins.

If you choose to use non-edible objects for markers, you may want to retitle your game, "Don't Take Jake." At my house, however, my kids prefer to yell "Don't Eat Pete!" regardless of whether or not they actually get to eat anything!

*One of my favorite things about this game is that all of my kids can play together, regardless of their age and what they are learning. For example, my preschooler might choose to work on colors or numbers, my first grader subtraction facts, and my fourth grader division facts. (The best part? They might even learn something from their older sibling's game board when it isn't their turn!)

Terms of Use – OneCreativeMommy.com

By downloading these images and files you are obtaining a "license to use" these graphic images and designs and are agreeing to the terms of this user.

All images and files are copyright 2014 by OneCreativeMommy.com

NO SHARING OF FILES PLEASE

YOU MAY:

- Use these graphics for your personal use.
- Recolor, resize, and otherwise modify these graphics for your own personal use.
- Educators may use the printed files in their classroom.

YOU MAY NOT:

- Offer for free or sell these graphics or files to others. (Please do not send copies home with students or give them to other teachers.) Instead, refer them to my website or my store at TeachersNotebook.com.
- Change these graphics or files in some way and claim they are your own.
- Resell or redistribute these graphics or files in printed or digital form in any way.
- Use these graphics for files for any commercial products (or in any way that will generate income) including web design or templates.
- Use these graphics or files for obscene, defamatory, or immoral works or any other purpose which is prohibited by law.
- Turn the original or derivative designs over to any company for any reason.
- Re-distribute/share/sell any OneCreativeMommy.com designs, images, or files in any way on print on demand sites such as Snapfish, Cafe Press, Zazzle, Minted etc.

Please feel free to contact me via email with any other questions or inquiries you might have at heidi@onecreativemommy.com.

Thank you!

